

207 DEAD IS HIGH
RECORD IN CHICAGOAt Same Time New Cases
Fall to 860 Total.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Influenza and pneumonia claimed the heaviest toll of the present epidemic during the last twenty-four hours. Two hundred and seven cases, 122 from influenza and 85 from pneumonia, were reported to Health Commissioner Robertson.

New cases of both diseases continued to show a marked decrease. From more than 1,900 cases yesterday influenza fell to 449 reported victims to-day, hardly a third of the daily total reached a week ago. Cases of pneumonia to-day numbered 222.

BOSTON, Jan. 31.—Influenza cases in Massachusetts passed the thousand mark today for the first time this year. The State Department of Health reported that there were 1,099 new cases in the last twenty-four hours, as compared with 825 yesterday. In this city the cases dropped from 315 yesterday to 287 today.

MAINE COAST AN ICE PRISON.

Naval Vessels Sent in Response to Pleas for Aid.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 31.—Many harbors and islands along the Maine coast, particularly in the vicinity of Penobscot Bay, are rebound in consequence of the long procession of cold waves, January, which closes with the coldest day of the winter, has a deficiency in temperature of considerably more than 50 degrees, according to Weather Bureau records.

The situation has become so serious along the eastern coast that two coast and cutter have been ordered there to break out the ice in the channels and assist in response to a telegraphic appeal from the Rockland Chamber of Commerce. "The telegram said:

"Harbors all frozen. No mails, no freight, no food or fuel. Suffering for weeks. Island people isolated."

FIFTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY SALES

The Hand of History
Writes

Fifty-five years of this Store's life have marked a steady and gradual expansion, from the modest single lot store on lower Fulton Street to the great retail establishment in the Borough of Brooklyn.

1865—The Beginning

In 1865, when the Store began, the Civil War was nearing its close; Lee had not yet surrendered at Appomattox. The new store faced a period of national reconstruction. But it forged ahead, outgrew by degrees its old quarters and in 1885, two years after the Brooklyn Bridge was opened and while the horse cars were still jingling their way along Fulton Street, it moved to its present location.

1899—Greater
Expansion

Greater expansion followed. Shortly after the close of the Spanish War (1899)—another reconstruction period, though a short one—the seven-story West Building was added. Then the building to the East was occupied and later increased to five stories in height, thus completing the A. & S. Store as we know it today.

Steady growth indeed! Now the group of buildings, on both sides of Livingston Street, comprises nearly 800,000 square feet—over 18 acres—devoted to storekeeping, without including the numerous outlying distributing stations in Brooklyn and on Long Island.

1920—Third Period
of Reconstruction

Now, in this new period of national reconstruction the Store too, has large plans for further development. But the same unvarying principles that have been significant of the Store from the very beginning will continue to guide it, and will cause it to continue to expand; because they are fundamental principles.

Indeed, it has a greater incentive to serve and a greater expectation of sound growth than ever before. For its opportunities are vast.

2,500,000 Population
for Brooklyn

Brooklyn, constantly growing, is in population already the largest of New York's boroughs. It is estimated that the 1920 census will give it a population of two millions and a half. A subway system that is rapidly nearing completion (1920 will see the practical fulfillment of the entire scheme, with 56 miles of new track) links up the Store, which possesses its own direct entrance to the Interborough at Hoyt Street, with the most remote districts of the whole city—from Westchester and Yonkers on one side to Coney Island on the other.

Far-Reaching
Plans Ahead

The beginning of its 55th year finds the Store increasingly young in spirit. Its desire to grow with its field has caused it to develop wide schemes for its further expansion and betterment. 1920 will see them in full swing with the object of making this still more the leading, the modern, the progressive great Store of Brooklyn.

And in that youthful spirit, full of new activity and new growth, it goes forward into its New Year, thankful for its friends!
